It is located at "Barranco Hondo", 1.100 mts. altitude, between the municipalities of Gáldar and Agaete. The troglodyte home (casa cueva) where used by the first inhabitants of the Canary islands, the "Guanches" and is a magnificent example of adapting the popular architecture to the physical characteristics of the land, with no risk of collapsing, and it is waterproof. "Barranco Hondo" has been declared Park of Cultural Value, standing out the cave-hermitage of Our Lady of Fatima, caved on stone, following the traditional troglodyte architecture, so popular in the north region of the islands.
