Situation

The house is located in a place known as El Hondillo, in El Cabo neighborhood, in the village called Villa de Santa María de Valverde, insular capital and the first council place that guided the North-Oriental region of the Island.

The Village of Valverde is a dispersed hamlet formed by three main neighborhoods: Tesine, La Calle and El Cabo. It has only 1.800 inhabitants and the annual medium temperature oscillates between 16 and 18 degrees. Valverde is the unique insular capital that has no direct contact with the sea, it is located in the valley that is 600 metres above sea-level. The house, located in a place that is an ancient reference of arrival and departure from the insular capital, keeps a strategic situation with the maritime and aerial services of the island, it is near the coast and near the inner villages that still maintain a great agricultural and cattle customs; being El Hondillo house one of the first houses that you can find in your arrival to the capital.

The house surroundings are important because the convergence of several local paths, little and big paths that have permitted to communicate the inner inhabitants with the coast and the capital during many years. All these characteristics make the situation of the house, a perfect and attractive place for the lovers of sports related to the rural places such as hiking, trekking and mountain bike.
